- 2008 CBC NEWS: TODAY 12:00 (CBC-NW), Toronto, 30 May 2008, 12:41PM, Length: 00:06:19 Details are still emerging about that multiple homicide in Calgary. What we do know, though, is police found only one survivor, a one-year-old girl crying but unhurt while her mother, father, and siblings were all dead. Is that little girl too young to be affected by what happened, and just how do babies deal with trauma? Psychologist "Melanie Barwick" can explain. She is with Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

Chair, Community Health Systems Resource Group Collaborative Research Symposia Series
The symposium will bring together experts who address organizational or practice change through innovative knowledge translation (KT) strategies, from the worlds of business, education, and health. In doing so, the venue will act as its own instance of knowledge translation and exchange between leading thinkers in these three sectors, drawing together current knowledge about how research and knowledge get used and how their use and uptake can be encouraged and improved upon.
